Implant Restorations and Comparisons

Implant loading protocols have come a long way. Not only can you load some implants sooner, the types of restorations that can be used and the potential aesthetics in such cases, can be amazing. This session will discuss the types of implants available, loading times, type of temporization techniques, and aesthetics. Patient selection will also be covered as that plays a role on how you treatment plan. Knowing the limitations or lack of limitations when it comes to implants can dictate how you restore your patients. We will discuss:

- Trabecular metal implants and the comparison with other choices
- The process of fabricating and managing provisional restorations
- The patient selection process for loading
- Identifying and manage potential complications

Treatment of the Worn Dentition

Patients often present needing 'just one tooth fixed,' but when you look in their mouth a collapsed vertical dimension leaves no space for a restoration. One tooth becomes a whole mouth and instantly the entire case escalates. How do we recognize the signs of a worn dentition? What if the teeth can't be utilized in the final restoration? This course will review how to properly analyze the worn dentition, and execute a full mouth rehabilitation. We will discuss:

- Various options for treatment and how to phase dentistry
- How to analyze conditions in the mouth and forecast the outcome
